INDEX.

'A. K. H. B.' as an essay writer, 164—'Gone,' 166.

Aberdeenshire mountains, flora of the, 82.

American conflict, the, 468—tactics of the North, 468—Southern successes, 469—the Northerns fighting solely for the restoration of the Union, 471—contrast between the energy of the people and the incapacity of their rulers, 472—the Americans governed by passions and ideas rather than by interest, 492, 493—incapacity of public men, 474-477—official corruption, 477-479—rumours of treachery, 479—want of individuality, 479—the Confiscation Act, 483, 484—superior governing and acting capacity of the Southerns, 485-487—Americans aggrieved at British criticism, 488-491—Mr Cairns' book, 491-496—emancipation, 496-501—probable issue of the conflict, 501-504.

Anglo-Saxon and Anglo-Norman Christianity—see Canterbury, Lives of the Archbishops of.

Archbishops of Canterbury—see Canterbury.

ssimilation of Law—see Law.

Austrian Empire, the, in 1862, 285—weakened by despotism, 286—what are the cases in which is not only possible but relatively beneficial, 287—early efforts at self-government, 288—Austria in 1518, 291—under Joseph II., 292—the Emperor Francis and George III. contrasted, 293—policy of the Emperor Francis, 294—alleged intermeddling of England, 295—best system of government, 296—mischief done by the Emperor Francis, 297, 298—the revolution of July, 299—disturbances of 1848, 300—Schwarzenberg's mistake, 301—fall of the Buol and Bach ministry, 301—the Reichs Rach of 1860, 302-304—the Reichs Rach of 1861, 305, 306—M. de Metternich, 307, 308—Count Rechberg called to office, 309—Count George Maïlath at the Diet at Pesth, 309, n.—effect of the war, 310—representative government established, 311, 312—M. de Schmerling's measures, 313, 314—the Austrian-Hungarian question, 315—the October decree, 315, 316—the Provisorium, 317—Hungarian claims and Imperial interests, 319, 320—Austria and the German States, 321, 322.

'Berobat Pinya,' 217.

Borneo, Mr St John's, 198—outline and general appearance of the country, 198-202—the Malays, 202—energetic character of the Chinese, 204—the Chinese in Sarawak, 205—Chinese secret societies, 206—the Chinese insurrection in Sarawak in 1857, 206—the Chinese as Colonists, 207, 208—the Dayaks, 209-219—rites and ordeals in Sarawak, 219—Sir James Brooke's government of Borneo, 220, 221.

Breadalbane flora, 84-89

British Alpine Botany, 69—fascination of mountain scenery, 70, 71—alpine botanists, 72, 73—flora of Great Britain, 73, 74—its origin, 75—its transmission, 76—theory promulgated by Professor E. Forbes, 77—ancient maritime flora, 78—the zones of altitude, 79—diffusion of alpine plants, 81—flora of the Aberdeenshire mountains, 82—the Astragalus alpinus, etc., 83—the Menziesia cœrulea, 84—the Breadalbane flora, 84-89—the Alsine rubella, 89—Gentiana nivalis, 89—the Azalea procumbens, 90—the Saxifraga oppositifolia, 91—Myosotis alpestris, 92—final cause of alpine flowers, 93.

'British Family Histories,' 154.

Brooke's, Sir James, government of Borneo, 220, 221.

Budgett, Mr Samuel, the successful merchant, 269—his early years, 270—his consistency of character, 271—completeness of his Christian character, 272.

Burgoyne's, Sir J., opinion of Mr Sortain, 267.

Campbell, Rev. Mr, of Row, and his religious views, 116.
Canning, Lord, 222—selected to fill the office of Governor-General of India, 223—first year of office, 224—first measures, 225—the greased cartridges, 226—steps taken by Lord Canning at the outbreak of the mutiny, 227—Lord Canning and the European community at the Presidency, 228—his trying position, 229—the Indian press, 230—the Press Act, 231—Lord Canning at work, 232, 233—policy in Oude, 235—the Oude Talookhdars, 236—defends his policy, 237—restitution, 238—gratitude of the Talookhdars, 239—fruits of Lord Canning's policy, 240—the Oude debate, 242—Sir Charles Wood's defence of Lord Canning's policy, 243—tribute by the people of Benares to Lord Canning, 244—right of adoption, 245—Lord Canning's return to England, 246—death and burial, 247, 248.
Canterbury, Lives of the Archbishops of, 35—outline of Dr Hook's work 35, 36—Dr Hook as a church historian, 37—mission of St Augustine, 39—sets out on his mission, Gregory's letter, arrival in England, sends interpreters to Ethelbert, 41—queen Bertha, interview of the missionaries with the king, 42—settlement of the missionaries, conversion of the king and spread of Christianity, 43—the liturgies, 44—Augustine and the English bishops, 44—Laurentius succeeds to the see of Canterbury, 45—a miracle, 46—Edwin of Deira, 47—mission to Northumbria, 48—the Celtic missionaries, 49—the conference at Whitby, 51—Theodorus raised to the see of Canterbury, 51—his labours, 52—ecclesiastical charges brought about by Dunstan, 53, 54—chief characteristics of the Anglo-Norman period, 55—Lancfranc, 57—the monastery of Bec, 58—the transubstantiation controversy, 59—Lancfranc patronized by William of Normandy, 60—he becomes primate of England, 60—his ecclesiastical policy, 61—the abbot of Glastonbury and the bishop of Salisbury, death of Lancfranc, 62—Anselm, 64–67—Becket, 67.
Carlyle's, Mr, Essays, 143.
Chesney, Colonel, on Russian expansion, 429.
Chinese in Borneo, 204–208.
Christian Individuality, 249—religious biographies and autobiographies, 249–252—the Rev. Mr Angell James, 253–260—men of one idea, 261—the Rev. Joseph Sortain, 262–268—Samuel Budgett, 269–273—the consecration of business, 273–275—Dr George Wilson, 275–280—perils of associate religious enterprises, 280–284.
Clough's, A. H., Poems, 323—memoir of the poet, 324–326—character of his poetry, 327, 328; poems expressive of personal feeling, 329, 330; poems founded on religious experiences, 331, 332—poems of the affections, 333—political poetry, 334—the Bothie of Tober-na-vuolich, 336, 337—Clough's descriptive poems, 339—the Amours de Voyage, 340—the lawyer's tale, 342, 343.
Cochleria Greenlandica, 78.
Crawford, Mr Quentin, 394.

Dayaks, the 209—may be regarded as the aborigines of the archipelago, their habits and customs, 209—marriage customs, 210—funeral rites, 211—morality, 211—omens, 212—head-hunting, 213—its baneful influence on the inhabitants, 215—Dayak mythology, 215—'Pamali,' 217—'Berobat Pinya,' 217—harvest feast, 219.

Essays, Old and New, 133—periodical writing, 133, 134—reprints from periodicals, 135—Montaigne's style, 135–137—essayists of the eighteenth century, 138—Charles Lamb, 139—Leigh Hunt and Hazlitt, 141—Carlyle and Macaulay, 143—Henry Taylor, 145—Mr Helps, 146—the essay of comparatively modern growth, 147—Mr Hannay, 150–156—Shirley's essays, 157–164—A. K. H. B., 164–167—Mr Patterson, 167—Hugh Miller, 168, 169.

Flora of Great Britain, 72–81.
France and Scotland, 369—French and Scotch alliance, 369—important offices in the court and army of France filled by Scotchmen, 370—ancient privileges of the Scotch in France, 371—Scotch names Frenchified, 372—royal marriages between the Scotch and French, 373—Scottish auxiliaries in the French army, 374—formation of the Royal Scottish body-guard, 376—tournament in Stirling before James II., 377—the archer guard, 378—ancient commerce between France and Scotland, 379—French expedition into Scotland, 380—broil between the French and Scotch in Edinburgh, 381—ambitious project of the Guise family regarding Scotland, 381—decline of French influence in Scotland, 382, 383—daring exploits of Scotchmen in the French army, 384—the Scottish guard, 385—Sir John Hepburn, 386—Huguenot emigrants, 387—the Scottish company of officers, 387–390—eminent Scotch professors and preachers in France, 390–395.
French commercial treaty of 1786, 183.

Grenville's, Lord, letter to Mr Pitt, 184.

Hannay, Mr, his early career, 149—account of European satire, 150—Mr Hannay's love of satire, 151—essays from the 'Quarterly,' 152—'British Family Histories,' 152–157.
Hazlitt's, Mr, Essays, 141.
Head-Hunting in Borneo, passion for, 213.
Help's, Arthur, style of Essay, 147.
Hermit, Robert the, vision of, 461.
Hunt, Leigh, a poet and essayist, 140.

Irving, Life of the Rev. Edward, 94—his power of fascination, 95—birth, Annandale, 97—school and university course, 98—Haddington, Kirkcaldy, 98, 99—Irving and Chalmers, 100—Hatton Garden church, 101—called to London, 102—his overwhelming popularity, 102, 103—domestic life, 104, 105—estrangement between Irving and other evangelical clergymen, 106—publication of the 'Orations,' 107—sacramental studies, 108—his intercourse with Henry Drummond, 109—the conference at Albury Park, 109—millenarianism, 110—doubts regarding Irvine's orthodoxy, 111, 112—controversy regarding the human nature of Christ, 113–115—the Row heresy, 115—the Rev. Mr Campbell's views, 116—is deposed by the General Assembly, 117—religious awakening, 117—miracles, 118, 119—the gift of tongues, 119–122—Irving and the London presbytery, 123—doings in Regent Square church, 124—Dr Chalmers, 125—Professor Scott of Manchester, 125, 126—Irving leaves Regent Square church, 127, 128—is deposed by the Commission of the General Assembly, 129—his sojourn in Dumfriesshire, and his return to London, 130—the end, 131.

James, the Rev. John Angell, 254—his conversion and academic training, 254—as an author and preacher, 255—was a man of one idea, 256—the purpose of his life, 257—the 'Anxious Inquirer,' 258, 259—Mr James' religious character, 259–261.

Lamb, Charles, as an essayist, 139.
Law, Assimilation of, 344—the dispersion of mankind and its effects, 345, 346—non-intervention, 347—the problem of assimilation, 347, 348—law grows out of convenience, 349, 350—law and custom, 351, 354—the distinctions of race, 354—elasticity of English law, 355—difference of character between the English and Scotch, 357, 359—report of the royal commission, 359—lawyers not good legislators, 361—assimilation of Scotch and English law, 362—complete assimilation revolutionary, 363—cases where assimilation would be advantageous, 364—origin of the demand for assimilation, 365; lawyers the parties who clamour for assimilation of law, 366—the mercantile community indifferent about assimilation, 367—where assimilation beneficial ought to be introduced, 368.

Macaulay's, Lord, Essays, 143.
Malays, the, 202, 203.
Mansel, Mr, and Mr Goldwin Smith, 23–34.
Metternich, M. de, as a public man, 299, 301, 307–309.
Michel's M., France and Scotland—see France and Scotland.
Miller's, Hugh, 'Essays, Historical and Critical,' 168.
Miracles, 118.
Montaigne's Essays, 135.

Patterson, Mr, on 'History and Art,' 167.
Perthes, the theological publisher, 273.
Pitt, William,—see Stanhope, Lord.
Pitt and Grattan, interview between, 189.
Popular prophetical literature, 397-403—Rev. Dr Cumming's interpretations, 403-404—Mr Frere's speculations, 404-405—the futurist school, 407—Louis Napoleon the infidel Antichrist, 408—undesigned assistance to infidelity, 411—Robert Hall on unfulfilled prophecy, 412—Bengel's discovery, 413—prophecy is not history in advance, 414—figurative style of prophecy, 416—importance of studying the writings of the prophets in arriving at their meaning, 417, 418—the aim of prophecy, 419-421.

Railway train, musings in a, 166.
Row heresy, the, 115—miracles, 118.
Russian, expansion, Colonel Chesney on, 429.

Sarawak, the Chinese in, 205.
Scotch professors and preachers in France from the fourteenth to the eighteenth century, 390–395.
Scottish Company of Officers, 387–390.
Scottish philosophy in France, 395.
Scrath, the, its habits, 160.
'Shirely' as an essayist, 156—his playfulness, 159—habits of the scrath, 167—Shirley on tolerance, 161—social martyrdom, 163.
Sinking Fund, the grounds taken respectively by Fox and Pitt regarding it, 185.
Smith, Mr Goldwin, on History and Philosophy, 1—historical scepticism, 3—history and science, 4—lectures on modern history, 6, 7—the philosophy of history, 8—the higher principle than ordinary morality which governs the universe, 8, 9—does history admit of scientific treatment? 10—speculative inquiry, 12—speculation akin to poetry, 13—the historian's vocation, 13, 14—does history rest upon connection? 15, 16—the law which guides the inquiries of the moral philosopher and the historical theorizer, 17—can the historian exclude the man of science? 19—the science of statistics, 20, 21—alleged antagonism between historical art and the more recondite processes of science, 22—Mr Goldwin Smith and Mr Mansel's controversy, 23, 24—identity and non-identity, 24—the methods of Smith and Mansel, 25, 26—Mr Smith's Rational Religion, 27—vagueness of Mr Smith and Mr Mansel's styles of expression, 27, 28—does the divine attributes differ from the human in degree? 29, 30—are Mr Smith and Mr Mansel reconciled? 31, 32—is natural theology to be uprooted? 33.

Sortain, the Rev. Joseph of Brighton, contrasted with the Rev. Angell James, 262–264—Mr Sortain's religious scruples, 265—peculiarities of his eloquence, 265—his style of preaching, 265, 266—social Stanhope's facilities for his task, 170—habits, 266—conciliatory disposition, 267.

Stanhope's, Lord, Life of Pitt, 170—his blunders in matters of fact, 171–176—the whig party, 177—Pitt's public reputation and private character, 178—his parliamentary success, 179—his military administration, 180–182—his political and financial principles, 182—the French commercial treaty of 1786, 183—his knowledge of political economy, 184—views upon the sinking fund, 185, 186—Pitt's domestic administration, 187—his political morality, 188—interview between Pitt and Grattan, 189—Pitt's bearing in the House of Commons, 191—his treatment of Fox, 192—ministerial negotiations, 193, 194—disinterestedness of Fox, 195—Pitt's last administration, 195, 196—his real greatness, 197.

St Clement's Eve, 448—eccentricity in literature, 449—Mr Taylor's poetry, 452–458—Philip von Artevelde, 458–460—vision of Robert the Hermit, 461–466.

St John, Mr—see Borneo.

Syria and the Eastern Question, 422—recent prominence of Syria, 423—its geographical position, 425—its ruinous state, 426—effects of emmigration, 428—importance of Syria to other countries, 429—French territorial expansion, 430—Syria, the isthmus of the world, 431—the coast region, 432—Northern Syria, 433, 434—Eastern and Southern Syria, 435—Syria as a route to India, 436–439—Syria as a place of residence, 440, 441—resources of the Euphrates region, 441, 442—coming revival, 443–447.

Taylor's, Henry, 'Notes from Life,' 145.

Thackeray's, Mr, letter to Mr Sortain, 267, n.

Tongues, the gift of, 119–122.

Vision of Robert the Hermit, 461.

Welsh, John, 392.

Whig party, the, Lord Stanhope on, 177.

Wilson, Dr George, 275—his religious awakening, 276—practical results of religious convictions, 277—his Christian character, 278.

'World, echoes of the,' 168.

Wortabet, Mr, on the capabilities of Syria, 440, 441.

MURRAY AND GIBB, PRINTERS, EDINBURGH.